CROWN GOODS WILL GO TO THE HIGHEST BIDDER.

Minister Cooper Will Reply to Prince David—The Articles Were Inspected After the Overthrow.

Minister of Foreign Affairs Cooper has Prince David Kawanakoa's letter, and will make a reply to it either today or tomorrow. While the Minister has not disclosed what the nature of his communication will be, still it is quite certain that no inspection of the crown goods will be permitted, and the public sale scheduled for Thursday noon will not be interrupted.

An explanation will be made to Prince David, which will in all probability be fully satisfactory to the Prince and Kapiolani, the queen dowager, whom he represents.

The crown silverware, glassware, china and crockery which are to be sold by the government, are the goods which were taken possession of at the time of the overthrow of the monarchy. At this time they were thoroughly inspected by duly appointed commissioners, with the view of identifying the personal belongings of the late King Kalakaua, his widow and Ex-Queen Liliuokalani. Colonel W. F. Allen was one of the commissioners, and James Robertson, chamberlain to the late King, represented Kapiolani. Everything claimed by the members of the Royal household were turned over, and the present stock of goods, which was decided to be purely government stuff, was turned over to Minister of the Interior King.

Afterwards Minister King surrendered the possession of the goods to Minister of Foreign Affairs Cooper, who had a careful inventory taken of the stock.

The goods were offered for sale a couple of years ago. The late Kate Field and others made purchases. The sale was discontinued because prices were too small. Later tenders were asked for the goods and two were received. One from Jeweler Wichman, for a part of the crockery and the other from Auctioneer Morgan for the whole lot. Nothing was done with these tenders.

The goods have been stored away in boxes in one of Morgan's back rooms for some time, and the impression has gotten around that some new goods have been discovered. This is erroneous.

THE WILEY CHINESE.

Vagrants Posing as Informers to Escape Arrest.

The police have been seriously annoyed during the past few weeks by Chinese hoodlums who pose as informers in order to escape arrest as vagrants. Again and again they have led the officers on raids in various quarters that have proved futile, and once or twice they have caused the arrest of men who have easily proven their innocence. The "regular" informers have had their ill gotten gains cut in severely, and many of their "combinations" destroyed, and the result is that they are mad. Liechee nuts and che fa tickets are perhaps just as numerous as they were formerly, but they are harder to find. Every effort is being made to ferret out the conspirators, and it is more than likely that many vagrancy arrests will soon appear on the Court calendar. The wiles of the "Haythien Chinese" are many.

ARE GOOD OFFICERS.

There is every probability that the members of Company A will re-elect their first and second lieutenants at the election to be held next week.

"It is a startling fact—at almost without exception, the adulterated teas are dangerous to health. Some of them are actually poisonous."
—N. Y. HERALD.

Yes; some—not all. But that isn't the point. You drink tea because you like it—not because it is good for you.

The wholesome tea is also the best-tasting. Schilling's Best—at grocers' in packages.
